Russian Operations in the Little Pamir Not to Be Feared by England.

EXPLORATIONS IN ASIA.

LONDON, Oct. 17 .- Right Hon. Sir M. Grant-Duff. president of the Royal Geographical Society, in an interview to-day on the subject of the so-called new aggression of Russia in the Pamir, whose tablelands are called the "Roof of the World" on account of their great altitude, said: "There is no necessity for the noise that is being raised about Prince Galitzka and the Grombtschevsky and their Cossacks on the Pamir. In the first place, the origin of the travelers' visit has been well known to this society. After Prjevalsky's lamented death the Geographical Society of St. Petersburg very sensibly decided that the best method of commemorating one of the greatest explorers of the century would be to fill up the gaps in his explorations, and complete our knowledge of central Asiatic geography. The scheme was carefully gotten up by experts, and ultimately three series of expeditions, organized simultaneously along three different lines, were dispatched in 1889. One was under Colonel Potseoff, and worked mainly in the south towards Thibet; the second, under the brothers Groum-Grishmailo, took, roughly, the region running along the Chinese border, while Grombtschevsky worked along the most westerly line of the three.
All three returned to St. Petersburg during last year, read elaborate papers before the Geographical Society, and spent a few months preparing their reports before starting out again. There can be no question, therefore, about the object of the expedition which has brought Grombtschevand Galitzsky on to the Little Pamin and created so much excitement in London. Grombtschevsky, like all Russian explorers, has a considerable escort, under the command of Prince Galitzsky. These escorts have always been incidents of Russian exploration in Asia, and the consequence is that

Russian explorers not only commonly reach their goal, but owing to the security they enjoy bring back more information than others. Grombtschevsky's escort, of which so much is heard, is only the escort he had on his expedition last year and the same as the other two expeditions working fur-

"If, then, as is quite clear, Crombtschevsky is exploring, he would naturally be beyond the Russian frontier, and this is made the main charge against him. But so is Captain Younghusband beyoud the British frontier. If the Russian officer was in the Pamir, the British officer must have been there, too. We know Grombstchevsky's object, for it is printed in the proceedings of the St. Petersburg Geographical Society; but what is Captain Younghusband and his little party doing! He has now been for some months fluttering between Kashgar and Yarkand, and has with him officers who speak Chinese and other languages of the region, and his movements generally very peculiar unless one has which, however, the pubnot. As for the Russians expelling Captain Younghusband from the Little Pamir, such a story could only be believed in India. It could serve no object, even if annexations had taken place, but would excite the people in England and India, which is just what an officer would not do in such circumstances. The curious point about the whole matter is that, save a summary of a private letter from Captain Younghusband, published in a London evening paper (which says not a word of annexation and reports that the Russians had recrossed and left Pamir), we have not a solitary scrap of substantial in-

"A rumor from Calcutta is discussed and increased by alarmists in Vienna, and replied to with a threat in a Russian paper, the substance of which threat is telegraphed to India and retelegraphed home as a fact, and then the English are allabiaze with 'Russian aggression' and other barsh phrases. This is the normal course of a Russian scare. But Lord Salisbury quite knows what is going on, and is disturbing himself very little about it. What is wanted is some arrangement by which the large escort with which Russian explorers carry on their work, and with which they excite alarm wherever they go, should be reduced so that the expedition should partake less of the appearance of a military invasion."

WORTH MILLIONS TO ROME.

No Danger of the Pope Being Compelled to Leave the Eternal City.

LONDON, Oct. 17 .- A Rome dispatch says that an extreme sensation has been caused in that city by the declaration of the Pope to the foreign powers that he does not feel secure in Rome. Although the large majority of the Romans are devotedly loyal to the throng of Italy, yet the substantial classes would view as a calamity the removal of the papacy, which is a most profitable patron of the trade and commerce of the city. The Vatican and the various church connections which would inevitably accompany the Pope in any direction he might take, spend, it is estimated, 6,000,000 lire annually among the business men of Rome. This is entirely irrespective of the vast total expended by lay and ecclesiastical visitors, drawn by the fact that Rome is the headquarters of the church. The amount expended by these varies annually, but an experienced resident says that in no year can it amount to less than 20,000,600 lire, including that which is paid for paintings, statuary, etc., by the wealthier class of tourists. It is true that a good deal of this patronage would remain, even should the papacy depart, but it is also to be remembered that. probably with most visitors the purchases of pictures and other objects of art are merely incidental to the visit.

It has been said that the Italian government would not permit the treasures of the Vatican to be removed, but keep them in Rome as a great museum for the Italian nation. As to this other governments would probably have something to say, as the treasures of the Vatican are in great part the gifts of foreign states and princes and were donated to the Pope and to no other beneficiary. Even the stained glass windows of the Vatican stairway were only recently given to the Pope by the Regent of Bavaria. It is extremely doubtful, therefore, that Italy could dare to retain property that obviously belongs to the head of the Roman Church. For this and other reasons there is just cause for the alarm said to exist over the Pope's recent and explicit threat to abandon the seat which the papacy has held for centuries, and it is believed that the Italian government may be willing to make some concession to prevent such a calamity. Polish Wreath for Parnell's Grave.

DUBLIN, Oct. 17 .- Delegate Ziminski artived here to-day from Warsaw, bringing with him a handsome wreath to be placed on the grave of Parnell. Ziminski says it was intended that he should be present as representative of the Nationalists of Poland at the funeral of the Irish leader, but the Russian government did not allow the date of the funeral to be published in the Polish newspapers. The wreath is composed of laurel leaves, entwined with the Polish colors, and with broad silk bands bearing inscriptions expressive of sympathy with the deceased and the cause for which he fought. The Poles who sent this testimonial of their regard and appreciation of the work of Parnell were obliged to smuggle it across the frontier, as the Russian authorities would undoubtedly have confiscated the offering, even if no harsher measures were adopted. M: Ferry Withdraws His Resignation. Paris, Oct. 17.—Peace reigns once more in the customs committee of the Senate. At yesterday's meeting of that committee M. Ribot, Minister of Foreign Affairs, and LONDON, Oct. 17 .- There being no endowments by which English Methodism can obtain for its divinity students a proper university course, the number of university graduates is small, amounting in the case of the parent body to about one in twenty of the number. Yet there is in the Wesleyan Conference a growing dislike to American degrees, and fears are being expressed in leading circles lest some of the English delegates to the Ecumenical Conference should come back with the cheap diplomas in their pockets. It is stated that one reason why the Rev. Lloyd Jones, of Rhyl. went to Washington was to utter a protest in the conference against the farce of giving "D. Ds." to men who have never earned Closing Race Events at Lexington Won by Min-. nie Wilkes, Alhambra and Vic H .- Nelson Fails to Start at Cambridge City.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17 .- Tattersall's presented a scene to-night that rarely was equaled in its history. It was a brilliant assemblage. There was scarcely a prominent turfman, stud-owner or lover of horses in America but who was to be seen at some time during the evening. The feature of the evening was the sale of the celebrated stallion St. Blaize, the greatest winning sire of the Nursery farm. By 8 o'clock the place was packed. Every one was discussing the merits of the great Belmont stallion until the business of the evening began. Mr. William Easton was in his best form. "St. Blaize is a horse of magnificent breeding," he said. "Among the many race-horses he sired, may be mentioned Tristan, Shotover, Peter, Thebais, etc., while Federace, St. Blaize's dam was a good race mare, of magnificent breeding." St. Blaize's color is a rich dark chestnut, with a narrow white blaze on his face, both his rear legs being white nearly to the knee and hock, while the coronet of his hind foot has a band of white about it. He stands about sixteen hands and half an inch. When St. Blaize entered the ring the auctioneer said: "Gentlemen, what am I bid?"

Some one cried, "$50,000." "I am bid $100,000," was the triumphant cry. Mr. Charles Reed, of Fairview farm, near Gallatin, Tenn., was the bidder. "It is the most sporting bid world has ever known. It has stop-ped you all," cried Mr. Easton. There was dead silence in the vast assemblage. The bids were stopped, and the king of stallions was knocked down to Mr. Reed. CAMBRIDGE CITY, Ind., Oct. 17 .- The matinee races closed to-day. The majority of the fifty horses that were driven for a mark were sent in the 2:30 class, and most of the owners say that Cambridge City has a mile course yet to be beaten. The great stallion Nelson appeared on the track at 4:30 o'clock. The condition of the weather was everything but favorable. There was a strong gale from the south, and besides this drawback, it was very chilly. Only a few of the one thousand in attendance anticipated that the stallion would make a mark. Nelson announced that he would only give an exhibition mile, as his horse showed lameness, but still the audience, principally of noted horsemen, were very anxious that he would beat his former record of 2:10. The crowd showed disappointment. It was plainly seen that Nelson had not had the proper training, but it must be considered that the horse has attended numerous races this season, traveling from Maine to Iowa, thence to Indiana, where he was expected to surprise the trotting world, then to Grand Rapids, where he met the king, Allerton, afterwards returning to Cambridge City. From here he will go to his home in Waterville, Me., for winter quarters. In conversation with C. H. Nelson he said his horse would probably be under a

NEVER REACHED THE FIRM.

Mr. Briggs's Money Stolen by an Employe of Kennett, Hopkins & Co.

NEW YORK, Oct. 17.-A number of statements were published this morning to the effect that complications resulting from the forgeries of Thomas H. Stout, Kennett, Hopkins & Co.'s defaulting employe, would result in placing an attachment on the assets of the firm to collect their payment of the claim of Thomas J. Briggs. A conference was held at the office of the firm yesterday, but the claim of Briggs against the firm was disputed. He had not had an open account with the firm for a year, but supposed he had, and transacted all his business with Stout, giving that person the only chance he had to embezzle funds. The securities and cash deposited with Stout never reached the firm, and when Stout suddenly disappeared there was no way in which the firm could discover that he had committed any crime until Briggs made his appearance, Since then the firm has proved all its accounts with its customers, and everything olse is correct. At the office reporters were referred to their counsel, Miller, Peckham & Dixon, who made the following statement: "Kennett, Hopkins & Co. are all right. Any claim that Mr. Briggs may have against them will be paid, but the claim must first be estab-The total loss alleged to have been sus-

The liabilities are stated by Mr. Loring to be $375,000, while the assets are nominally put at $800,000, which includes every dollar's worth of personal property owned by the individual members of the firm, although the amount is generally believed to be somewhat exaggerated. The firm is building United States steel armored cruiser No. 11 for the government at a contract price of $674,000, with $100,-000 added as speed premium, and is also constructing half a dozen steel tug boats, also for the government, the latter being nearly completed.

It was expected up to Saturday morning that Mr. Loring would receive credit for work done on the new vessels now being constructed for the United States government that would enable him to meet all payments due, but learning that the construction put upon the contract by the United States government officials was such that he could not realize for some weeks on the same he consulted with some of his largest creditors and many of the banks which be permitted to die in so peaceful and pain- were carrying his paper. SAM JONES ON A DRAY, Horse That Caused the Change.

The Early Life of the Exhorter and the Atlanta Constitution.

Before Sam Jones went to preaching he ran a public dray at Cartersville, his native town. He was a familiar figure around the depot, and he at that time hauled all the drummers' trunks from the depot to the hotel. Many veteran drummers yet remember Sam as a drayman. outfit was a small, rickety, rattling, ramshackling wagon and an old sorrel horse that was old and experienced enough to have come down from the revolutionary war. This horse was a character in his way, and some people say he was the cause of Sam's reformation. He was as humble a horse as one would wish to see. He submitted to all Sam's cuffs and rebuffs without any protest other than mildly backing his flea-bitten ears. He had an air of one who was always deeply engaged in thought, and looked upon the frivolities of this life with supreme disdain. And then Sam's horse was extremely unsociable in his temperament. He never cared to make any new acquaintances, and seemed desirous of treading the wine-press of sorrow alone. For many days he went on in the same quiet way, drawing Sam's rickety old dray with the sublimest fortitude. It was never necessary for Sam to tie him when he left him, for he had such insurmountable constitutional objections to locomotion that there was little danger of him taking his departure. So Sam thought, and so it was for many, many

But things do not always remain the same, alas! One day Sam's horse was seen, to the most extreme surprise of the Cartersvilllans, tearing down Main street followed by the dray, which was rolling about from one side to the other. Down the street he went like mad, and it seemed wonderful to those who knew him intimately that he could acquire such speed. Sam, who had left him for some purpose, stood watching his mad career eagerly. "He's decided to emigrate," Sam remarked, as the horse continued in his wild Presently the borse swerved to the right and the wagon struck against a tree, and, with a crash, came to a stand-still. The spectators all went down to survey the wreck. It was a complete one, indeed Sam stood and looked at it silently for some moments in deep reflection. There was a pathes in his voice when he finally turned around and said: "I guess I'll have to find some other way to make a living."

In a few weeks Sam left Cartersville, and went down near Columbus. "The next I heard or saw of Sam," said the gentleman who told me the story, "he

General Miles Says the Fires of Discord Still Remain in the Sioux Country.

Congress Urged to Provide for a Grand Mobilization of the National Guard at Chicago

During the World's Fair.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17 .- The annual report of Maj.-Gen. Nelson A. Miles, commanding the department of the Missouri, is mainly a historical review of the Sioux war of last winter, its causes and results. Among the causes that resulted in the Sioux outbreak he mentions the gradually increasing poverty of the Chevennes and the Sioux. the insufficiency of their rations issued by the government and the failure of the crops in 1889 and 1890, and the inability of the Indians to emigrate to other parts of the country. General Miles commends the administration of Captain Penny as acting Indian agent at Pine Ridge, and says that through additional appropriations the Indians now receive nearly one-half as much more than they did a year ago. In concluding his remarks on the campaign he says: "Notwithstanding the fact that the volcano has cooled down, the fires of discord still remain. Even while the hostages were at Fort Sheridan they received communications from their friends in the Sioux camps stating that they had not given up the conspiracy of a grand uprising of the Indians, and that the Utes were ready to join the Sioux whenever they were ready to resume hostilities. Communications have been discovered going on between the different camps, inciting Indians to hostilities, and even now (the report is dated Sept. 14) there is a delegation from the Indian Territory absent, ostensibly to visit relatives at the Arapahoe and Shoshone reservations, in Wyoming. They have, in fact, gone across the mountains, and are now in the abodes of the supporters of the Messiah delusion, near Pyramid lake, in Nevada. During the months following the serious disturbance of the peace the confidence of all has been restored. Many of the settlers have gone back to their abandoned homes and ranches, and the Indians have resumed their accustomed occupations. The affairs are gradually adjusting themselves after being in a state of transition for a long time. The days of large holdings of land by the Indians in common will eventually cease and the Indians will take up lands in severalty.

"As we approach nearer the time of the world's Columbia exposition the most important affair of the kind that has ever een held in the world, it would seem advisable to take advantage of the occasion to mobilize or assemble what is known as the National Guard or State militia. The Constitution has very judiciously and wise-ly reserved the control of these forces to the various State governments, but as a means to promote the efficiency of the various organizations it would be well to assemble them under congressional enactment, with the approval and authority of the various State governments in one national encampment at least once in a generation. As there has been no gathering of that magnitude since the armies were dispersed in 1865 I would respectfully recommend that the militia be rought together at this peace jubilee. Most of the members of the National Guards who are engaged in the great industries of the country will desire to be present at the exosition at some time during its session, and many of them would prefer to come with their organizations in order to combine with the encampment the benefits of the exposition. It would also be beneficial to the State organizations to be brought together in one national encampment, where they would have the advantage of meeting troops from other States. For instance, those of New England would be placed alongside of those from the guif, and those from the Atlantic and interior meet those from the Pacific slope, making one grand encampment of the citizen-soldiery of this country, where patriotism and the spirit of emulation would prompt each organization to attain the highest degree of excellence.

"As the general government makes yearly appropriations for the equipment of the militia I see no reason why it should not provide transportation for assembling it in the encampment above proposed. The reasonable reduction of rates in other countries for such movement of troops and frequently given in this country would reduce the aggregate cost say for ninety thousand State troops and ten thousand federal troops to $850,000, approximately. For that purpose I would respectfully recommend that Congress be asked to make the necessary appropriation and to provide the requisite authority for such a move-

JOINT DEBATES. Effect of One That Took Place in Fort Wayne

Nearly Forty Years Ago. Writer in Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

The idea of challenge debates between political leaders and candidates for office is new to this section of the country, but it was a grand feature in the West, Southwest and South, years before the late war. In the South it frequently gave rise to those "free fights," which Tom Marshall once gave as an object lesson of our Southern institutions, to Captain Marryatt, R. N., whose Notes on America, particularly touching the "peculiar institution," were so repugnant to Marshall. The writer remembers one of these joint debates in 1854, the advent year of the Know-Nothings, and the time of Kossuth's visit to this country.

The debate took place at Fort Wayne, Ind. I was then engaged on the prelimmary survey of the Lake Erie, Wabash & St. Louis railroad, and was located at Fort Wayne. Colonel Jones, a Virginian by birth, was one of the leading lawyers of the place, as was also Hugh McCulloch, afterward United States Secretary of the Treasury. The joint debate took place at the court-house on the common, on Saturday evening. The call included the voters of all that county, which extended over a radius of more than thirty miles. I recall one of the posters; it read as follows:

Blacksmith and Democrat, will meet Whig and Aristocrat, to-night. Gloves off. Come on, boys!

I asked Jones what it meant. "Come down and see," was the reply. I went. Joe Smith beat Joe Randall, as was decided by the vote at the close. "'Squire," said Jones to me, "you heard the result of that vote!"
"Yes." "Well, it is three months before election, and that vote will go to the polls as a man." If I mistake not, this was the beginning of the movement that changed Indiana from a slave-loving State to first a free-soil one and then to a Republican one. The vote of that county was as solid in October and November, as it was on that full moonlight evening in July.

Frigidity Personified.

Detroit Free Press. She was very rich, but slightly passe, and he was poor. "You are so beautiful," he whispered as they sat out in the lambent light of the harvest moon, and the languorous music of the orchestra in the distant ball-room was wafted to them, sweet and low, on the evening air. She did not take her hand away as she felt the warm pressure of his upon it. "But beauty fades," she sighed regretfully, and there was a touch of bitterness in her tones.

"Yes," he said abstractedly, "I had noticed that." She snatched her hand from his, and with a scornful look froze him to the spot, so that the iceman picked him up with his tongs in the morning and delivered him at the kitchen door.

Sherman and Foraker at Cincinnati. CINCINNATI, Oct. 17 .- Music Hall was the scene to-night of the largest political meeting held in that hall during the campaign. Every seat was filled.
